Mammogram Call-Backs

You will be called back for additional views on your mammogram. Because of the nature and appearance of breast tissue, it is commonly necessary to reassess a specific area for greater detail. It is very common to be called back for a more detailed look, and most call-backs result in reassuring findings that are not threatening to your health.

10% of women are called back with each mammogram, and 60% of women are called back over a lifetime of screening.

At this time, there is no further information about your specific results until more detail is available, but we hope this information helps you to understand the reason for your call back and gives you some peace of mind as we wait for more detail.
